THE Earl Waldegrave had this Day the Honour to kiss the Queen's Hand, on being appointed Master of the Horse to Her Majesty, in the Room of his late Father, deceased.

Vienna, October 23. The Emperor arrived here this Afternoon in perfect Health.

Dublin Castle, October 26.

THE following is his Grace the Lord Lieutenant's Answer to the Address of the Lord-Mayor, Sheriffs and Commons of the City of Dublin.

THE Expressions of your personal Regard and Public Approbation must at all Times be highly acceptable, and are, are at the present Moment, peculiarly flattering, as they afford an encouraging Proof, that my Conduct has ever concurred with your genuine Opinions; and that whilst you praise a moderate, you expect a firm Administration.

I am confident that the Spirit and Zeal of the Magistracy for the Welfare and Dignity of this great City, will not suffer a Revival of the late disgraceful Outrages: You may rely upon a constant Exertion of my Assistance.

I shall ever be cordially anxious to co-operate for your Gratification in such Objects as may appear to the Legislature to have a just and salutary Tendency. Your Wishes upon the Subject of Commercial Regulation wisely connect your natural Attention to the Welfare of this Kingdom, with a liberal Regard for the general Interests of the Empire, and must influence my warmest Exertions.

My Attachment to our Constitution in Church and State, is as unalterable as yours can be; and I feel in the Assurance of your Support, the strongest Conviction of the Propriety, and Encouragement to hope for the Success of that decided Conduct by which I shall ever study to consult the real Interests and Happiness of Ireland, in maintaining the Authority of the Legislature, and the Security of the Protestant Establishment.

[The Address was printed in the Gazette of the 25th ult.]
